

Riding In An Ambulance

This is a social story about riding in an ambulance.

Sometimes I need to get to the hospital quickly I might need to ride in an ambulance. An ambulance is a type of truck that brings people to the hospital.

The people who work inside an ambulance are called paramedics. Paramedics are there to help me.

The ambulance might have bright lights that flash. These lights tell people around us that we need to get to the hospital soon.

There might also be a loud siren noise coming from the ambulance. This noise helps us get to the hospital quickly!

I can cover my ears if the noise is too loud.

When I am in the ambulance, the paramedics might tell me things I need to do. It is important I listen to what the paramedics say. The paramedics will take good care of me.

I did a great job learning about riding in an ambulance!
