This is a story about going to the ear doctor. The doctor wants to make sure my ears are strong and hearing well.

I can tell the doctor at any time if I need a break.

I will enter the doctor's room, sit down on the exam table, and wait for the friendly doctor to arrive.

The doctor will show me a special tool called an otoscope.

The tool has a short rubber part that will shine
a light into my ear, so the doctor can see what's inside.

The doctor may ask me to move head in different ways or touch my ear. This will help the doctor see inside my ear even better!

The doctor will look into both my ears.

This shouldn't hurt- but if I feel uncomfortable, or it hurts my ear at all, I can ask the doctor for a break. I can also ask to hold someone's hand if I am scared.

I am so brave!

I did a great job learning how to get an ear
exam!
